

Fleet Africa supports Botshabelo Home for abandoned babies

This Nelson Mandela Day, Fleet Africa proudly embraced the spirit of giving by partnering with Botshabelo Home for Abandoned Babies. As an organisation committed to making a meaningful impact, we chose to support Botshabelo, a vital NGO dedicated to caring for orphaned and abandoned children.

Since its inception in March 2000, Botshabelo has been a beacon of hope for vulnerable infants and children. The organisation provides a stable, safe, and loving environment for those who are abandoned or given up for adoption. Many of the babies arrive in their care as early as 30 weeks, some are born prematurely, and require intensive nurturing and support.

In our partnership, Fleet Africa donated essential items from Botshabelo's wish list – items essential for the daily care and development of babies. These contributions will directly support the organisation's mission to provide individualised, high-quality care and ensure that each child's needs are met as they grow and thrive.

The dedication of Botshabelo's caregivers and volunteers is heart-warming. They not only focus on the physical well-being of the children, providing good nutrition and monitoring development but also offer emotional stability and love. The goal is always to prepare these children for a transition into their "Forever Families" through adoption, reunification, or fostering, typically within their first year of life.

At Fleet Africa, we are honoured to support such a deserving cause and contribute to the nurturing environment Botshabelo provides. Our involvement in this initiative reaffirms our commitment to corporate social responsibility and the profound impact we can have on our community.

We look forward to continuing our support and making a difference in the lives of those who need it most. Here's to many more opportunities to give back and honour the legacy of Nelson Mandela through acts of kindness and compassion.
